Why You Should Cry Your Eyes Out

So many of our congregants apologize to me at funerals. They apologize when they start crying. They even apologize during the eulogy, as if we need to be ashamed for having loved so deeply.

So many of us tend to see tears as a sign of weakness or vulnerability. In truth, however, tears are a sign of strength. They are a sign of life. They are a sign of real feeling. We cry because we are alive. We cry because we care.

The 3000 Year Old Tears

The ancient Israelites knew this truth. They saw tears as sacred. Several decades ago, for example, archaeologists discovered a 3000-year-old vessel. It served as a sacred container for human tears.

Sometimes we do not know our feelings until we let them out. Tears do so. Tears, uniquely, can express a range of feelings, often seemingly opposite ones. We cry in pain. And cry in joy. We shed tears of loss and tears of happiness.

What Happens When We Don't Cry

What happens when we don't let ourselves cry? We strangle our feelings. We hold them up inside.

Sometimes holding inside our feelings is necessary. Yet, over time we can become acclimated to it. Hiding our feelings becomes natural, and we become callused and insensitive. We forget how to love, how to cherish, how to feel, and feel deeply. We may lose the pain, but in so doing, we also forget the joy.

I tell grieving family members to let themselves cry. Tears testify to their love. They evoke the tenderness and intimacy that make life meaningful and sacred.

One writer calls tears "a sacrament of love." They are an x-ray of our heart. Even for the ancient rabbis — who privileged study and the intellect as the critical means for relating to God — tears transcended other forms of worship.

Cantor Glikin's Desk — The Power of High Holy Day Music

I clearly remember the first time I attended a service in a synagogue. It was Yizkor on Yom Kippur and I was 13 years old. I was sitting in between my mother and my grandparents, none of whom had ever been to the synagogue before either. Despite the fact that they had never been, they knew that they had to be in a synagogue for Yizkor and this was our first opportunity to do so since our immigration to the United States from Ukraine on the 4th of July earlier that year. I felt completely lost and did not understand what was going on. The prayers were strange and unfamiliar. The Hebrew was entirely alien. The people seemed unfriendly and aloof. I wanted to leave.

Unexpectedly, the cantor started to sing a familiar piece of music. I knew this song from the Children's Jewish Musical Theater in which I had participated while still living in Ukraine. Everyone around me was singing and I started to sing along. Immediately, the discomfort I had felt earlier melted away and in its place surfaced feelings of connectedness and belonging. The previously ostentatious atmosphere now felt warm and heimische. The people around me no longer seemed as strangers, but as long-lost relatives. I felt that I had found my home and my roots.

It would take years for me to fully realize the impact of that powerful moment. But even at that time, at age 13, I recognized that music served as a most potent connector. A familiar song gave me the feeling of belonging and became an entryway into what had previously seemed to be a completely foreign environment. It demonstrated to me that the synagogue was, in fact, a part of my culture also.

Music is often referred to as "the universal language," implying that it has the power to communicate across cultural barriers. In Judaism, music is certainly a "universal" language, but it is also a "holy," a "timeless," and an "essential" language. Music has the power to connect us to ourselves, to each other, to God, to the past, and to the future.

Music is central to High Holy Day worship. Many of the tunes that are heard during Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur can only be heard at this awesome time of year because they reflect the mood of the holidays. When we hear the pleading notes of "Avinu Malkeinu," our hearts are instantly cracked open. When we are reminded of the High Holy Day nusach (tune), we are immediately transported to all of the previous High Holy Day celebrations in our lifetime. Even if we do not know that the melody we are hearing is in the "Adonai malach" mode, the musical mode that is literally translated to mean "Adonai ruled" and which is reserved for the most grand of melodies, we are moved by the magnificence of the sound, which so accurately reflects the tone of the Days of Awe.

Perhaps, the full measure of the power of High Holy Day music can be gleaned from the story of the Kol Nidre prayer. At various times during our history, the Kol Nidre prayer, which annuls unfulfilled vows, has been used by anti-Semites as proof that the oath of a Jew is worthless. While there are halachic laws that severely limit the kinds of vows that can be annulled, in the late nineteenth century, a number of Reform rabbis in Germany stopped saying the words of Kol Nidre due to their discomfort with the message of the prayer. But even as the prayer was no longer recited, so strong was the pull of its melody that it was still played at the service named after this central prayer. Eventually, even those synagogues that stopped saying the Kol Nidre prayer resumed the practice because of the emotional pull of the chanted words.

Leonard Bernstein wrote, "Music can name the unnameable and communicate the unknowable," highlighting what most of us know to be true on the visceral level. Music has the ability to crack open our souls and to touch our very essence. It manages to bypass the intellectual and to reach directly for the heart. In fact, music is the very language of the heart, capable of fully expressing the power of our emotions. Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur, as well as S'lichot, the holiday that prepares us for the Days of Awe, are a time of heightened emotions. In this time, we come together as one community to contemplate, reflect, and recommit ourselves to our highest values and ideals. We look deeply within our hearts, striving to become the best possible versions of ourselves. I hope that the music during the Days of Awe will uplift, stir, inspire, and move you to return to the land of your soul.

FEATURING CANTOR VICKY GLIKIN AND SPECIAL GUESTS

Moshe Wilensky is one of the most significant and influential composers of the new Israeli Song. His compositions tell the story of the land of Israel and the State of Israel from 1930s until the late 1990s. Join us at this concert to learn about Wilensky's life and to hear the music that helped shape a nation.

From Our President

The busy summer of congregation life is drawing to a close and now we usher in an even busier season. This month we will celebrate the High Holidays together, reconvene our Religious School, and finish up the last few things we did not get to over the summer...

Obviously the September (or once in a great while, October) headline for a synagogue is worshipping together on Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur. I look forward to this assembly of Solelites every year. Together we welcome the New Year, ask forgiveness for our sins, and recommit to a year of faith and fellowship.

With Rabbi Moffic, Cantor Glikin, our fabulous choir, and our extended Solel family together in our beautiful sanctuary, it is hard not to be moved and feel the power of our congregation. I hope that these High Holidays continue to strengthen the bonds of our congregants and remind us all how much we love Solel and our Solel family, and how gratifying it is to be a member of our community.

Rosh Hashana Reception

In addition to praying together, we have a longstanding tradition of sharing warm greetings during the High Holidays at Solel. And 5776 will not be an exception. The board of directors, Rabbi, Cantor, and our families want to see every congregant, and shake hands or give a hug at our annual Rosh Hashana reception, immediately following services on Monday, September 14 in the tent you will see on the east side of the building. And many of us plan on staying at the reception for a long time, so family service attendees can stop by on their way in as well.

Religious School

On Sunday, September 20, between Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur, our Religious School will celebrate its first day of classes with our new Director of Congregational Learning, Ashley Plotnick. All of Ashley's and Religious School Coordinator (and teacher) Michael Schneider's hard work – bringing together an outstanding faculty of long-time and new teachers, updating the curriculum for 8th -12th grades, scheduling valuable family activities for the year, and talking with lots of parents and students – will culminate in our first day of school, and the beginning of another rewarding year educating our youth.

End of Summer...

Our fiscal year and our spiritual year conspire to create a rush of activity as summer comes to a close.

September Artist Exhibit in Lounge: Bert Menco

Solel will host a reception for our September artist, Bert Menco on Friday, September 4 at 6:30 pm and he will explain his work to the congregation.

Biography

Bert Menco (born in 1946, Arnhem, The Netherlands) worked as a Research Associate Professor in the Department of Neurobiology and Physiology at Northwestern University (Evanston, IL) from 1982 until 2006. As an artist, he draws, paints, and prints, the latter at the North Shore Art League in Winnetka. He has had several one-person shows in this country as well as abroad. Most recently he exhibited in Chicago at the Art Center in Highland Park and the Oculus Gallery in the Pilsen neighborhood. Concurrent with this show he has a one-person exhibition at the Re-Invent Gallery in Lake Forest. He has participated in numerous invitational and juried exhibitions. His artwork has been featured in books, newspapers and magazines. Bert's work is represented in private as well as museum collections. He received a Sponsors' Award in the 3rd Sapporo International Print Biennale (1995) and his work is included in The Best of Printmaking: An International Collection, Rockport Publishers, Gloucester, MA (1997). Menco curated and co-curated several exhibitions in the Chicago area, among these (October 2007) "Devils & Beasts" at The Art Center in Highland Park.

Bert Menco's Dutch-Jewish background has had an unavoidable personal impact on him. Much of his interest in art came from his mother's father, who was murdered by the Nazis. Another important factor in kindling his interest in art was his childhood neighbor, the retired grade school teacher and surrogate grandfather (as Menco never knew one) Mr. van der Giessen. Mr. van der Giessen, who, by the way, was Audrey Hepburn's grade school instructor, had an incredible collection of art books, which he generously shared with Bert and his brother Ido. Bert did not elect to pursue a career in art, but rather chose a career in science. However, throughout his scientific career he managed to be very active in the arts.

In 1972 he left The Netherlands for Coventry, England, to pursue an advanced degree in science at Warwick University, resulting in a Ph.D. in Agricultural Sciences (Wageningen, The Netherlands, 1977). In 1975 he returned to The Netherlands, where he worked at the University of Utrecht, and in 1982 he left for the United States, after a brief German intermezzo. In each country where he lived and worked he also pursued his art. As a scientist he studied the cellular biology of the sense of smell using electron microscopy. His art is insofar affected by his, now former, scientific activities, that the often-tedious discipline needed in research is also used in his art. However, Bert believes that his actual images do not relate to his scientific work; he does not use nature as his main source, but rather his quite active inner world.

Artist's Statement

Though they may seem simple, my drawings, intaglio prints, and paintings are actually quite elaborate; half a year's work on an image is no exception for me. I draw directly or use small sketches, even doodles, as image-generating nuclei, often combining two or three that appear to complement each other. I rarely use concrete references, but rather work from inner visions. I tend to be narrative in my own art, perhaps even poetically narrative. I don't see my images as telling a story but rather as reflections of inner feelings, similar to some poetry, and would like observers to read them as such. I like to believe that my work carries a certain mystery. My images are very much "inside out." I have usually some idea of what I want to achieve, but much of the image is generated while I draw or paint. The end product always surprises me. Analyzing my own art is difficult but I think that the dreamlike images tend to deal with confined spaces. Within these confines, certain characters try to reach out to one another but do not quite succeed. This theme is a reflection of a precarious balancing act that many of us have to deal with in our lives.

Solel Film Group Presents: The Two of Us

Film & Discussion Moderated by Eugene Finerman

Tuesday, October 6 at 7:15 pm

Charming and delightful...That is not the usual description of life in Nazi-occupied France. Yet, through the eyes of a young Jewish refugee hiding on a farm, "The Two of Us" is a joy. It is also an autobiography, and Director Claude Berri shares with us the surprises of his adventure.

The rambunctious young Claude seems to invite trouble, to the despair of his parents; in occupied France, a Jewish family does not welcome attention. Christian friends arrange for Claude to be sheltered on the farm of an elderly couple; but the boy must hide his Jewish identity. The old farmer is a curmudgeon who subscribes to all the anti-Semitic stereotypes and prejudices. Yet the cantankerous bigot and the boy become the best of friends.

With an irresistible performance by Michel Simon as the endearing grouch, the award-winning French film has English subtitles.

Mitsva Committee Expanding

The Mitsva Committee is expanding and planning for the future! The co-chairpersons for 2015 are Dr. Phyllis Loeff and Marilyn Meyers, who want to bring the possibilities of doing mitsvot near to everyone. There are moments in every life when an instantaneous reaching out and response can be restorative and fuel us to face our tasks with renewed vigor. Most of us are unaccustomed to asking for help in our personal lives from our fellow congregants. Still, we hope the benefits of the giving and taking will encourage us to ask from one another.

We hope to create an ongoing network that can perpetuate itself by offering opportunities of many kinds to help others and make a difference. The task may be small or on a one-time basis. We hope we can discover needs unanswered before, and invite all our members to call us when they become aware of a Solelite who could use some help.

Here are some possible situations:

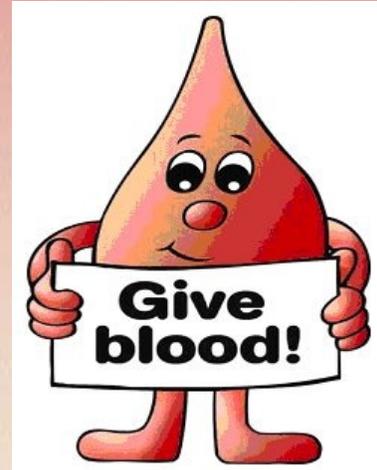

- Transportation; a ride to and from a doctor's appointment; a ride to services or a class at Solel.
- Visiting those in need; homebound convalescents, patients in the hospital.
- Emergency phoning; in illness or a death in the family.
- Errands: pick up prescriptions or groceries for the homebound or for a family with a sick child, respite for the caretaker.
- Meals: for the unexpected crisis.

As you can see, most of these needs are more crisis-oriented, but we want to hear from you if you know of a need unmet in our congregation where a Solel friend could help.

Please call Congregation Solel's office at (847) 433-3555 and they will contact the committee.

Join Solel's Fall Blood Drive!

October 25

Nationwide, someone needs a unit of blood every 2 to 3 seconds and most of us will need blood in our lifetime.

Join your fellow congregant donors for bagels and cream cheese, home baked goodies and shmoozing.

Appointments can be made by contacting Diane Resnick: dnrphd@gmail.com or (847) 926-8510, Julie Bringas: jbringas@sbcglobal.net, Debbie Zucker: zuckerdeb@sbcglobal.net or by going on the Lifesource website: <https://donateblood.lifesource.org/>.

From Our President

The last few of us still need to finalize our membership commitments and High Holiday admission card requests. Allan Litwack, Evelyn Brewer, Michelle Raz, Vic Bassi, and Jenny Gilbertson manage all of this efficiently and with the sensitivity required in our sacred community.

Sharing Solel

We are welcoming new congregants, too. Like the gates of prayer and repentance in our Yom Kippur morning meditation, the gates of Solel are never closed. These coming weeks present wonderful opportunities for you to share Solel with your friends, family, neighbors, and colleagues. Our High Holiday family services are open to all, and younger children (pre-K, kindergarten, and 1st grade) can attend our Religious School before their family joins the congregation.

L'Shana Tova

Ricki, Adele, Harry, and I want to wish you a happy, healthy, and fulfilling Days of Awe and New Year. We look forward to greeting you in the coming weeks and to worshiping, learning, committing to social justice, sharing lifecycle events, and congregating together for all of 5776.

Tears are Holy

One of the great eighteenth century rabbis, Mendel of Kotzk, tells the story of one of his students.

This student told Rabbi Mendel that he was suffering and in such pain that he could not pray or study. He felt guilty and ashamed. Then the rabbi said to him, "What if God prefers your tears to your studying?"

Sometimes God prefers our tears to our words. Sometimes God prefers our tenderness to our eloquence.

Mazal Tov to James Pasternak on his Bar Mitzvah!

James Pasternak, son of Susan and Andrew, will become a Bar Mitzvah on September 5, 2015. He is in 8th grade at Lake Forest Country Day School in Lake Forest. James's favorite hobbies are playing tennis, RC planes and playing basketball with his brother Josh. From his Mitzvah Project, James learned that he enjoys speaking Spanish to communicate with people in his local community, and that he can use some of his skills to help other kids. James's Torah portion is Ki Tavo, from the Book of Deuteronomy. The most important thing James learned from his Torah portion is that rules and consequences help create ethical and behavioral norms and expectations. The important thing James learned from his experience becoming a Bar Mitzvah is that hard work pays off, even when it's not fun. The greatest challenge he faced in preparing for his ceremony was learning how to think about the Torah's meaning for his own life.

Mazal Tov to Jacob Zucker on his Bar Mitzvah!

Jacob Zucker, son of Bill and Debbie, will become a Bar Mitzvah on September 26, 2015. He is in 7th grade at Edgewood Middle School in Highland Park. Jacob's favorite hobbies are playing baseball, hanging out with friends, and going to Camp Chi. From his Mitzvah Project, Jacob learned to be grateful for what he has because some people have extra challenges in life. Jacob's Torah portion is Ki Ha'azinu, from the Book of Deuteronomy. The most important thing Jacob learned from his Torah portion is the importance of passing things down from generation to generation. The important thing Jacob learned from his experience becoming a Bar Mitzvah is to work hard and to be grateful for what he has. The greatest challenge he faced in preparing for his ceremony was learning the different tropes.
